IN MEMORIAM

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, the author of all good, and the giver of all mercies, has seen fit to remove from these earthly scenes, our beloved friend and fellow Episcopalian, Mr. R. C. Moore;

Therefore be it resolved: First, that we bow to the will of Him who is too good to be unkind and too wise to err.

Secondly, that we convey to her loved ones our heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the mercies of our Heavenly Father.

Third, that we accept her departure as a challenge to us to anticipate our approaching fate, and to be more strongly united in the ties of friendship and sisterly love.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family. A copy be sent to the Times-Virginian for publication, and a copy be recorded in the minutes of the Emma Hancock Circle of Liberty Church, Appomattox, Virginia.

Signed: Mrs. Anna R. Coleman, Mrs. Grace B. Dawson, Mrs. Don Moses.

Working People when you go to vote on Nov. 5th, remember Senator Byrd's tirade against labor unions. It was wrong for the workers to increase in pay, but Senator Byrd could not vote to increase his own pay by $5,000 per year. If you want the politicians and office holders to get more vote for Harry Byrd, if you want economy in Government to the working man can have more vote for Lester Parsons.

'Horse Doctors' Win Big Battle

Save Cattle From Germ War In Secret Laboratory; Beat Axis Pest.

WASHINGTON.—One of the great scientific victories of the war was won by veterinary researchers in a secret island laboratory in the Canadian wilderness.

There they learned how to protect the rich cattle herds of North America against a suspected threat of germ warfare. A new and powerful vaccine was produced against "rinderpest," a fatal scourge of cattle in parts of the orient and Africa.

The cattle plague never had touched the western hemisphere, but U. S. and Canadian authorities strongly suspected the Japs or Germans might attempt to introduce the deadly virus to this continent.

If they had, the cattle of North America would have been vulnerable, they had developed no immunity from previous contact.

So the men in the secret laboratory at Ross Lake in the lower St. Lawrence river—worked under terrible urgency.

Ready for Axis Pest.
Six officers of the U. S. army veterinary corps, one from the navy, and two Canadian scientists were assigned to produce a vaccine. The U. S. medical war service co-operated.

Well before the war ended they had produced sufficient vaccine to meet any emergency.

They also had perfected production methods to turn out enough vaccine to vaccinate every head of cattle on the continent if there had been need.

The story of the rinderpest vaccine is a highlight of wartime advances achieved by military and civilian "vets" and by scientists of the U. S. department of agriculture against certain maladies that in some instances are transmissible to man himself.

Advances were made against two of "sleeping sickness" in Africa, and against anthrax, a deadly disease that can affect man.

Progress was made against Bang's disease and anthrax, serious animal diseases that can affect man.

Vaccines Prepared.
Through veterinary research, new avenues of investigation may have been opened against human influenza and arthritis.

Earlier rinderpest vaccines were prepared from virus-infected tissues of cattle. Yields of vaccine were low, and the American-Canadian commission felt also that there was always the hazard of including dangerous bacteria.

They developed the new vaccine by growing the virus in developing hen's eggs.

Virus material procured from Africa first was injected into calves.

Then virus from the calves was injected into the eggs through tiny "windows" made in the shells with dental drills. The "windows" were covered with tape.

About 100 inoculated eggs provide enough vaccine for the yield from one sick calf. One egg provides enough for seven vaccinations.

Experimental cattle were kept in "isolation units." No bedding was provided and the animals were fed no hay because remnants of manure might harbor the virus.

G.I.s Marooned in Greenland Found Natives by Too
PHILADELPHIA.—Life was little monotonous for 11 American soldiers marooned at an army air force weather station at Scoresby-sund, a tiny settlement in Greenland some 300 miles above the Arctic Circle. A Philadelphia soldier admitted when he returned home.

The Philadelphia, who spent nearly a year on Walrus Bay, is Staff Sgt. Walter R. West, 22. He was a brother. Staff Sgt. Wilbert West, 27, who served with the marines on Guadalcanal.

The Arctic village where the younger West spent his time has its points, but would not appeal to most people as a permanent home, he said on his arrival here. He and other men in the group were flown to New York on a C-54 transport.

"The colony manager forbade the men to enter any of the houses in the town," he said. "That meant we could not visit a home unless we were invited. We were invited, though, and we had some of the villagers over to our house."

It was a late thaw that kept the army men in the little Greenland town until July of this year. They went in last August 2 to make weather observations, their boat left on August 12, and the ice started to crowd the shore in October, earlier than it had moved in 25 years.

Geyser Sensation Now
DIRTY Boiling Mud Hole
CODY, WYO.—The new geyser that erupted into existence in the Norris museum area of Yellowstone national park a short time ago has drawn away to a mere hole and a parking area may be laid out on the spot.

Eruptions of the park's "sensation of 1946" now seem to have stopped for good, experts say, and about all that is left is a pot of "ugly-looking boiling mud."
